THE RELIGIONS OF THE WORLD

By GEORGE A. BARTON

Professor of Biblical Literature and Semitic Languages in Bryn Mawr College

Professor Barton's book fills a long-felt need in the field of comparative religion for a collection of facts which are suitable for the general reader. The book deals with the origin, history, and principal teachings of all the great religions. The author points out those characteristics of Christianity which make it destined to be the universal religion, and the result of the study should be a greater respect for all religions with a supreme allegiance to Christianity.
